

Loudon County Commission Forum Notice

The Loudon County website now contains an online commission forum where county commissioners may log in and discuss matters pertaining to county government. This is an online forum that is open to the public. Anyone may access the forum at any time (except during routine maintenance or occasional technical difficulties) to view the forum and any comments posted. Residents should be able to access the forum from any computer that has access to the Internet. For residents who do not have a computer, the forum may be accessed at any of the Loudon County public libraries by using the computers designated at each library for public use.

Only county commissioners have access to log into the forum and post comments. The forum can never be used by commissioners for voting. It may, however, be used to have open discussions and debates about topics that may be voted on during scheduled commission meetings. To view the forum, visit the Loudon County Government website at www.loudoncounty-tn.gov and navigate to "Government," then "Commission." On the County Commission page, click on the "Forum" tab.
